

Irini Stathi

Irini Stathi is Assistant Professor (Theory of Cinema and Audiovisual Arts) at the Department of Cultural Technology and Communication of the University of the Aegean (Greece). She studied Theory of Spectacle at the Department of Disciplines of Art, Music and Spectacle (Discipline delle Arti, della Musica e dello Spettacolo) at the University of Bologna and she has an PhD from the University of Panteion- Athens (1996). She worked at the University of Patras and collaborated with other Universities as well as with various Institutions as Film Museums, Archives and Cinemateques in Europe and Greece. She is responsible of the Audiovisual Applications and Communication Laboratory of the D.C.T.C. and she directed a number of research projects, among which Restoration and Digitalisation of Films. She collaborated with various cultural organisations in Greece and abroad and has published extensively on Cinema Theory, Audiovisual Production and Audiovisual Heritage and Conservation, particularly in digitisation of Audiovisual Culture.