

Maureen Webster-Prince

NATIONAL LIBRARY OF JAMAICA (NLJ)

maurweb2@gmail.com

Maureen is the National Library of Jamaica's Deputy Director, Head of its Audio Visual Department and the Founder and Coordinator of Jamaica's Audio Visual Information Network (AVIN). She initiated the development of the Audio Visual Information Data Access (AVIDA) system which is used for the management of audio visual collections. She represents the audio visual archiving community on the Advisory Committee for the development and coordination of the National Information System (ACNIS).

For the past decade Maureen has been working assiduously towards the development of a vibrant AVIN in which all stakeholders in the cultural and media industries understand their individual and collective responsibilities in preserving the nation's cultural heritage. To this end she has organised and executed several workshops, seminars and a regional conference. Additionally, Maureen continues to expose the work being done by AVIN as well as its projected activities through presentations at national, regional and international workshops and conferences.